JUDGE GARY, biggest man in steel, and John D. Rockefeller, Jr., biggest man in oil, ate breakfast and discussed prohibition enforcement with President Coolidge yesterday morning. They had sausages, coffee and buckwheat cakes. Discussion is easy, enforcement is difficult. Judge Gary said all officials must set the example, by obeying the dry law. They don't do it and won't do it. A Congressman's wife testified about her husband's party in Washington: "There was the usual amount of drinking at a Congressman's house." That's about how it is...

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE permits no alcoholic drink in the White House, drinks no stimulants himself. He represents a minority of one in ten among officials.

Mr. Rockefeller, also a total abstainer, says the public mind must be stirred. It has been stirred, but not toward prohibition.

BOOTLEGGERS, bootleg whiskey, bootleg crime, hijacking, hold ups, increase in drug use, bribe-taking enforcement officials, all the drink they want for rich men, etc., have turned the public mind toward the idea that prohibition does not prohibit. What can be done about the growing conviction that you cannot, by writing a law or a Constitutional amendment, force men to change habits held for ages.

SANTA CLARA is agitated about ghosts that disturb a young boy and girl. Trances, the neighbors call the sleep in which strange visions frighten the children and superstitious neighbors.

Such visions and dreams, as old as the human race, are said by scientists to be responsible for the beginnings of religion and belief in another world.

THE CAVEMAN, seeing his dead father in a strange dream, said on awaking: "Then he's not entirely dead after all, a wonder where he went."

The witch doctor and magician elaborated the idea, and many fairly pagan theories developed, with assorted ideas of Heaven and Hell. The way to avoid Hell hereafter, and terminating by spirits now, was to be generous with the witch doctor. Fortunately, we have a better religion.

STOCKS WENT UP again yesterday. Interest rate on call money went down. That is a combination as sweet as new Spring grass to the little lamb. Money for stock speculation could be borrowed, all you wanted, for 2 per cent., lowest rate since November.

THERE IS LOTS of money if your credit is good, or you have security. The big telephone company borrows $150,000,000 with the greatest ease. "Please may I have $150,000,000 for improvements, Mr. Morgan?" "Certainly," is the reply. "Don't you need more." Telephone credit is very good.

RAILROADS THAT owe the government millions say they want a lower interest rate, and will probably get it. That is fair, as the government lent at 6 per cent., wa. rates, and can now borrow for 4 per cent., but the man who put a mortgage on his home at 6 per cent. cannot arrange the rate so easily.

SENOR PATINO arrived from Bolivia yesterday. Two secretaries, a doctor, a valet, and fifty pieces of luggage followed him down the gang plank. That means money, and he has it.

HE'S THE RICHEST man in Bolivia; owner of the biggest tin mine in the world. Tin is better than gold, if you get the right mine. Senor Patino, on his way to Spain as Bolivian minister, has at least $100,000,000.

IN SPITE of all the money, this gentleman wishes to live and die in Bolivia, except for little trips. That will puzzle

SEIZE 16 IN 'FIREBUG TRUST'

Four New Arrests in Brockton Alleged to Reveal Huge Arson Plot

Brockton, Jan. 9.—With the arrest of sixteen persons, local police and New York detectives at work here, believe they have uncovered one of the biggest "Arson Trusts" in the history of Plymouth County.

For months they have been quietly at work here, and about a month ago started the roundup which they say will eventually result in the arrest of every member of the so-called trust." Day by day arrests have been made on the firebug charges and police say that none will escape that a complete cleanup will be made.

The latest arrest was that of Israel Solomon, forty-four years old, of No. 30 Bay road, Brockton. He is charged with being accessory to arson and to burning property to defraud an insurance company." He was held in $5,000 bail and was slated to appear in the District Court today.

OTHERS HELD IN $70,000.

Solomon is charged with being concerned in the fire at No. 32 Linden street, on October 2, last.

Other persons arrested this week include Sam Spekin of No. 25 Prospect street, prominent shoe manufacturer and leather dealer; Harry Kaplan of No. 62 Carey street, cobbler at No. 176 School street; and Libert to Rivelli of No. 17 Snow street. They have been held in $10,000 bail each for a hearing January 12.

An important witness for the State is Harry Atwood. He is being carefully guarded. He lives directly across the street from the Spekin factory. He will testify, the police say, that he was awakened by the voices of persons talking loudly outside the factory shortly before the fire started there.

For months past there have been

JURY FREES KELLY AND DEVINE

Disagreement Is Reported on Corcoran and Hartnett; Jurors Out 48 Hours

William J. Kelly and Thomas Devine, two of the four defendants charged with conspiracy to extort money from Victor A. Searles, were found not guilty by the jury in Suffolk Superior Court today.

In the cases of William J. Corcoran and William J. Hartnett, the other defendants, the jury reported they had disagreed on all three counts of the indictment.

It was announced that Corcoran and Hartnett will go on trial again on the same charges on January 19, that date having been set by Judge Bishop at the request of District Attorney O'Brien.

Haggard and wan from deliberations that lasted forty-eight hours lacking five minutes, the record in Suffolk criminal courts, the jurymen were discharged by Judge Raymond.

CONGRATULATE KELLY.

Exhausted from their long vigil with practically no sleep except short naps in their chairs, the jurymen first hurried to barber shops and went home to make up their shortage.

The courtroom was filled when the doors were opened at 10 o'clock, a line having been in waiting for some time previously. When the verdict was announced, a great many lawyers rushed forward and congratulated Attorney Kelly.

He was overcome by his acquittal and was unable to reply to the many congratulations of his friends. Devine was also the recipient of many congratulatory handshakes. All the defendants, except Hartnett, were in court.

After the jury was discharged, a proclamation was read announcing the end of the December term of the first criminal session of the Superior Criminal Court.

Kelly and Devine shook hands with the jury, and the same process

'Jazz Bandit' Is Suspect in Many Daring Holdups

$3,000,000 IN EDISON CO. RESERVE

With the telephone company seeking an advance in rates of 23 per cent. and with one of the New England railroads preparing to dump 1,000 miles of unprofitable branch lines, every right-thinking person in this part of the world will be glad to know that there is one public service corporation hereabouts with a reserve fund of $3,000,000.

That corporation is the Edison

Edward F. McDonald, 26-year-old self-confessed jazz bandit, got the breaks for a long time but now he'll have to take a rap, in the parlance of the underworld.

McDonald, who was arrested following two daring downtown holdups, has been identified as the perpetrator of at least two others, and during the day a number of victims are expected to "put the finger on him."

The youthful gunman held up the clerk in the Schulte cigar store at Tremont and Eliot streets, while Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson was chatting with Patrolman John J. Watkins, the 100 per cent. policeman, not twenty-five feet away.

BLAZE IN BURKHARDT BREWERY

Damage of $15,000 at Roxbury Plant; Woman Leaps Out South Boston Window

One woman jumped from a window and damage estimated at $17,000 was caused by two fires in South Boston and Roxbury today.

The South Boston blaze was to the two and a half story boarding house at No. 948 East Broadway, and the other in the famous old Burkhardt Brewery at Parker and Station streets, Roxbury.

Maud Stanhope, 35-year-old lodger at the South Boston house, leaped from a window in her night dress, plunging twenty feet. She sustained a sprained back, and was taken to the hospital. The fire started on the roof of the building, owned by Mrs. Elizabeth Plevack, and caused damage of $2,000.

BREWERY FIRE.

Residents of the Roxbury Crossing section were excited when fire of undetermined origin broke out on the fourth floor of the Burkhardt Brewery.

Because of the tenement houses and factories in the district, two alarms were sent in and Fire Commissioner Theodore A. Glynn hurried to the scene.

The blaze was confined to the brewery, working through to the fifth floor and causing damage estimated at $15,000.

The fourth floor, on which the fire started, is occupied by vats, while that above was filled with malt. A large quantity of hops was stored in an adjoining building.

TRAFFIC TIED UP.

Since prohibition the brewery has manufactured one-half of one per cent. beer.

POLICE TRY TO BATTER DOWN DOOR

Men Face Death for an Hour While Experts Work Frantically to Save Them

Trapped in the big vault of the Provident Institution for Savings, two employes of the American District Telegraph Company today faced death for one hour while police, firemen and safe experts worked frantically on the outside in an attempt to break down the big vault door.

The door was held fast by a time lock which was set to open at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning, and it looked as though the men were doomed to be suffocated while the men on the outside worked fruitlessly and furiously to save them.

But the knowledge of the Morse code came to their rescue. It was learned that the lock on the inside was a simple one, and was covered with glass. If the men could break the glass they could release themselves. An expert on code was sent for. He took a sledge hammer and rapped out the message:

"Break the glass over the lock and you can open the door."

SAVED AFTER HOUR.

The men received the message, broke the glass and left one hour from when they went in they walked out to the open air amid the cheers of the bank officials and the workers who were trying to free them.

The men are Robert F. J. Johnson of No. 248 Washington

EDGAR ADMITS EDISON COMPANY HAS $3,000,000 IN RESER

Electric Illuminating Company of Boston.

The Edison has just had a series of record-breaking years.

Everything has been so rosy with the great light and power monopoly that in the year just past the directors increased the salary of President Charles L. Edgar $10,000.

GETS $50,000 SALARY.

President Edgar now gets $50,000 a year and no one charges that he is overpaid. Man and boy, he has been with the Edison for forty of the company's forty-one years. He is said to be without a superior in executive ability among all the illuminating companies in the land.

Further facts about the unparalleled prosperity of the Edison were developed on the second "Hurlburt Day" of a hearing before the Department of Public Utilities, at the State House, Chairman Harry C. Attwill presided.

The inquiry is the result of a petition by the Boston American and other consumers, seeking a reduction in rates. This was the second "Hurlburt Day" because Henry F. Hurlburt, Jr., has only recently come into the case as attorney for this newspaper.

EDGAR TESTIFIES.

Just as was the case on Mr. Hurlburt's first appearance, two weeks ago, the principal speaking parts were taken by President Edgar, seated in what might be described as the witness's chair, and Mr. Hurlburt, as examiner. Frederick Manley Ives, general counsel for the Edison, was on hand with such objections as appeared to be necessary, while Chairman Attwill interposed a few remarks now and then to clarify a situation and keep everybody more or less happy.

No one forgot for a moment that the rate of the Edison Company is its Class A customers—these being the home-keepers, the office folk and the small retail shops of Greater Boston and beyond—is 8½ cents per kilowat hour.

According to the facts drawn from President Edgar in the course of five hours, it ought to be the easiest thing in the world for everybody connected with the Edison to be happy and smiling.

After hours of talk about peak load, depreciation, reserve fund, conduits, kilowat hours, operating revenue and operating expenses, these are the facts which stand out as of particular interest to Edison consumers who feel that they are paying too much for electricity:

NEW BUSINESS COST.

In the first nine month of 1924 the "new business" expenses of the Edison Company amounted to $240,000.

The new business OBTAINED by the company in those nine months amounted to $1,200,000.

The "new business" expense, therefore, was 20 per cent. of the value of all the new business.

Decrease in the cost of coal in 1924, as compared with the 1921 price, brought to the Edison Company a saving of more than $1,000,000.

Not a cent of this saving or of any other economy thus far brought to light, has been shared by the Edison Company with its consumers in the way of reduced rates.

In the 20 years from 1905 to 1924, both years inclusive, the reserve fund of the Edison Company (the amount set aside annually to provide for depreciation) jumped from $400,000 to $700,000, or about 70 per cent.

That was for 20 years, remember.

But in the four years from 1919 to 1924 this reserve fund was jumped to more than $3,000,000, AN INCREASE OF MORE THAN 300 PER CENT.

In the first twenty years, in other words, the Edison Company increased its reserve gradually and fairly, but in 1919, or thereabouts, began to make money by "hustling it away" into a huge reserve fund. Four years ago, this fund was only $700,000; today it is above the $3,000,000 mark.

In 1919, for example, the company "passed to reserve" the sum of $350,000. In 1923, four years later, the amount thus passed to reserve in a single year was $1,250,000. They took this money out of income, put it in what they call the reserve account, and then invested it in the business.

Every penny of it came from the consumer.

The consumers' banner year—for the company—appears to have been that year 1923. In addition to the $1,250,000 taken for "reserve," the company—also out of "income"—replaced, repaired and renewed worn out parts of plant and equipment to the extent of more than $1,500,000, and charged it up to "operating expenses."

So that, in one year, for reserve, replacement, repairs and renewals, the E. E. I. Company took from the consumer nearly $3,000,000. To say nothing about dividends, amounting to about $2,000,000 more.

It was further brought out that while the "A" rate customers—homes, offices and small stores—take only about 21 per cent. of the Edison current, THEY PROVIDE 45 PER CENT. OF ITS INCOME.

They use about 1-3 of the current and they pay almost ½ of all that the Edison collects from everybody.

There was nothing approaching fireworks until Mr. Hurlburt asked:

Q.—Can you give me the salaries of the higher officers of the Edison Company?

Frederick Manley Ives, general counsel for the company, was on his feet in an instant.

"Is this competent, Mr. Chairman?" Mr. Ives appealed, "It is very embarrassing. The salaries of the legal officers of the company are stated in our annual returns to the department."

Mr. Hurlburt said he had no desire to pry into personal or private affairs. "But, after all," he urged, "this IS a public service corporation and I think we are entitled to the information."

It was agreed that counsel for the Boston American will be furnished with a complete list of such salaries.

Q.—(By Mr. Hurlburt)—Was the salary of the president of the Edison Company increased in 1924?

A.—(By Mr. Edgar)—It was.

Q.—How much?

A.—Ten thousand dollars.

Neither the vice-president nor the secretary got a raise, it was brought out, although the treasurer was boosted $3,000.

STOCKHOLDERS SHARE.

This testimony recalled that of President Edgar at the hearing on December 23, last:

Q.—So it is fair to say, isn't it, Mr. Edgar, that the STOCKHOLDERS of the Edison Company shared pretty handsomely in the great prosperity of 1923?

A.—Yes.

Q.—But the Edison Company, by any cut in rates, hasn't given the consumer ANY of the benefits of that prosperity, has it?

A.—Since 1923, no.

This latest inquiry developed the interesting fact that President Edgar doesn't know where the town of Bedford is, although it is one of the communities served by his company. Another revelation of interest is that while YOU pay 8½ cents per kilowat hour, the Edison Company sells electricity to the Town of Wellesley at a price which permits Wellesley to sell it over again at 8½ cents. Wellesley does not give its 50 watt lamps away, but it does sell them at cost.

Chairman Attwill and Commissioners Stone and Hardy were on the bench from the beginning to the close of the hearing. Commissioner David A. Ellis was present a considerable part of the day. The Commissioners showed keen interest in the unfolding of facts about that huge Reserve Fund.

The inquiry will be resumed in the Public Utilities hearing-room at the State House on Wednesday of next week.

Salem Jail Hit by X-Word Habit

PASSES TIME AT SALEM JAIL

Prison inmates generally throughout the United States have taken up the cross-word puzzle as a means of recreation. The more is being encouraged by wardens and other penal authorities.

Prisoners, Busy on Puzzles, Improve in Their Behavior

Salem, Jan. 9.—The cross-word puzzle mania has hit prisoners at the Salem Jail and House of Correction. According to jail officials it is a "mania" for good. Yellow-backed novels and lurid magazines have been discarded in favor of the daily newspapers and dictionaries.

When their day's work is over now prisoners rush their "chow" and hit for the'r cells, taking advantage of every minute of daylight and the short period when the electric lights illuminate their cages. "What's four letters for a queer bird?" sings out a lad at one end of the tier on the second floor; "Dodo," is the response from the other end, respondent firing back a request for another word.

Prisoners confined at the St. Peter street institution are divided into two classes, those awaiting trial and those serving sentence. Those awaiting trial, jail prisoners, are not obliged to work. They have all the time in the world and many of them use it to advantage, working over the elusive word puzzles.

When a prisoner received a full-sized unabridged dictionary the other day officials began to realize that the boys in their charge were taking hold of the solving of puzzles with a vim. "Now we have fewer bad marks and reprimands and fewer punishments have been handed out here within the last month than in any like time in the history of the jail," said Edward C. Carlin, deputy sheriff in charge of the jail.

millions here who do not know just where Bolivia is, but wonder why a man "with the price" does not move into the American cabaret belt.

Wise nature makes the normal man think the sky, air and earth of his native land the finest in the world.

An Eskimo from the Arctic, a Zulu from the tropics, will both die of sorrow if you transplant them, even to Palm Beach.

SOMEBODY REPRESENTING the railroads will have to do some thinking, and plan something, or very respectable United States railroads are going to suffer no matter how much the government may do for them.

Motor trucks are robbing the roads of short haul freight, and the long haul goes more and more by canal wherever it can. Mr. Thom for the railroads says so.

Do railroads intend to meet new conditions or just die out, like the dinosaur, when his time came and the rats gnawed his big feet?

The motor truck and flying machine will be the rats of the railroad dinosaur.

2 MEN LOCKED IN VAULT OF HUB BANK

Chelsea, and J. W. Whittier.

The men had been sent to the bank to install a new system of electrical prevention of thefts. The big vault door had just swung open at 9 o'clock. The men arrived a few minutes later and prepared for their work.

At 9:45 they entered and ordered the door to be closed and the men were doomed to stay there until tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock unless the door could be opened.

A call was sent to the fire department and the police. Safe experts were called. The telegraph company was called. In short every known means was called upon to get the man out.

Laborers and police with chisels and sledges attacked the outside of the lock and the hinges. Another group started to dig away the two-foot thick masonry that made up the back of the vault.

Meanwhile it was known that there was but a small quantity of air in the vault chamber. It was feared the men would die before the door could be battered down. There was some talk of using nitroglycerine to burst off the door.

Then someone remembered that the lock on the inside was a simple one covered with glass. A hurry call was sent in for a man who could send code. He came and with a sledge hammer tapped out the message telling the men what to do.

No reply was received from the men inside. Cold sweat stood out on the foreheads of the men outside.

They did not know if the men inside were overcome or not. There was no wal to tell whether or not they had received the message. No way to know if they understood the code. But they took the chance and repeated the message several times.

Then when it was thought the men were overcome, and who they were practically conceded to be in the pathway to death, the door opened and the men stepped out. They were smiling, but it was a sickly smile.

Fortunately they had understood the code. They could not send a reply for they had no heavy hammer to tap with. But they searched for the glass over the lock and broke it. Then it was a simple matter to open the lock and swing the heavy door open.

was gone through by District Attorney O'Brien and Albert Hurwitz with the defense counsel.

After the jury had left the court-room, O'Brien, Corcoran and Attorney Thomas I. Hogan, counsel for Hartnett, who is sick, went to Judge Bishop's session at the Superior Court. The district attorney asked that an immediate assignment of Corcoran and Hartnett's cases be made for retrial, and Judge Bishop put them on the list for January 19.

It was announced that the trial of Victor Beaulieu, who is charged with statutory offences, and which was set for January 15, has been postponed until February 15.

Attorney Lothrop Withington, counsel for Searles, has had to go South on a business trip. It was stated.

Drinking Promotes Cancer, Berlin Doctor Says

Berlin, Jan. 9 (Universal Service Wireless).—Riches and strong liquor, besides causing many other troubles, are also some of the best allies of cancer. That is the statement of Dr. Rudolff Foester, based on study of cancer statistics of many countries.

Dr. Foerster says constant use of concentrated alcoholic drinks seems to promote the formation of cancer.

Likewise, cancer is more frequent among the well to do than among the poor, which is shown especially in America and England.

Lord Mountbatten Thrills Household With Tale of Spirit Visit

By JAMES WHITTAKER.

New York, Jan. 9.—The amusing story of how some of the jewels, part of $125,000 worth taken from the home of Sabra Cosden during a dinner dance for the Prince of Wales last September, were recovered, has been told.

Notorious Broadway gamblers and thieves bribed their way into the so-called "400-circle" which clustered about the Prince of Wales during his Long Island visit.

On August 29 Lord and Lady Mountbatten," says the detective's report, "the honorable Mrs. Richard E. Norton and Mr. Lytle Hull arrived at the assured's (Mrs. Cosden's) home, and were their guests until September 3, sleeping at the assured's home every night.

MOVEMENTS OF PARTY.

"According to statements made by Mr. and Mrs. Cosden and all their guests, on the evening of September 3 they left the Cosden residence in Mr. Cosden's two automobiles about 1:30 p. m. and drove to the residence of Joseph Pulitzer on Long Island, where they had dinner and remained until 11:30 p. m. At this time they departed to the residence of Mr. Ambrose Clark to attend a party given in honor of the Prince of Wales, and remained at the Clark residence until about 2:30 a. m. Then they all returned to the Cosden home. When the cars arrived William F. McCahill, the private watchman, who has been in the employ of Mr. Cosden about ten years, opened the door and admitted Mr. and Mrs. Cosden and their guests.

IN MRS. NORTON'S ROOM.

They asked McCahill if he could give them something to eat, and McCahill immediately proceeded to the pantry and began to make sandwiches for them. While he was so engaged, Mrs. Cosden walked into the pantry to assist him. They all had sandwiches, fruit, milk and ginger ale. At 4:30 a. m. Mr. and Mrs. Cosden bade their guests goodnight and proceeded to their rooms.

"A few minutes later Lord and Lady Mountbatten, Mrs. Norton and Mr. Hull proceeded to Mrs. Norton's room. Lord Mountbatten remained there a few minutes and then entered his own dressing room, which is directly across the hall from Mrs. Norton's room. He was engaged in taking out of his pockets his gold cigarette case, wallet, etc., when he heard a noise in his bedroom.

SMILED AT "GHOST."

If Lord Mountbatten had hurried then to the open door between his dressing room and the bedroom the great jewel mystery would have been solved on the spot.

But Lord Mountbatten stood stock still, holding his trousers in one hand and cupping the other to an ear. And Lord Mountbatten smiled.

The cause of Mountbatten's smile is a part—and a very significant part—of the fabric of fact in which will finally be found the thread of the mystery's solution.

Mountbatten is a firm believer in ghosts. He will swear that he has seen ghosts in dozens of castles and places in Europe. He will argue with anyone about the Conan Doyle spirit manifestations and the hundreds of English tales of chain-clankers, night-howlers, immaterial baby-snatchers and the like, taking the affirmative side.

"GHOST" TICKLES MRS. COSDEN

Lord Mountbatten, indeed, had discovered a ghost in the Cosden House. He had seen it.

A week before the night of the robbery (September 9) Lord Mountbatten, who then had a bed in the room he was using as a dressing room, had opened his eyes at 4:30 a. m., and had distinctly seen the Cosden Ghost mooning around his room.

He had told Mrs. Cosden about her ghost and she was immensely thrilled. All of the best English country houses have ghosts. Very few American country houses can boast one. Mrs. Cosden could now tell a story similar to those told about the finest mansions in the Old Country.

Lady Mountbatten, the Hon. Mrs. Richard Norton and Mr. Lytle Hull, who were the remainder of the English visiting party, were less thrilled. They were used to Lord Mountbatten's ghost stories.

LAUGH OVER STORY.

So, when Lord Mountbatten finally laid down his trousers, wrapped his limbs in a dressing gown and summoned his wife and Mrs. Norton and told these two ladies of the noise he had heard, they both merrily chimed:

"Oh, it's just another one of Battle's ghosts!"

It was while this wakeful party was giggling over "Battle's" ghost that "the ghost" himself, materialized enough to make a certain amount of noise in his predatory wanderings, was rifling three sleeping rooms on the second floor of the mansion of a fortune of $125,000 in jewels.

A moment later the ladies were having a lot of fun at "Battle's" expense when they discovered, or thought they discovered, that his "ghost" was only the watchman, William F. Cahill, moving about Lady Mountbatten's bed while he arranged a hot water bottle between the sheets.

RECORD IS CLEAN.

The curious part about the various statements made by all the guests of the Cosdens and by Mr. and Mrs. Cosden themselves is that they all agree that McCahill made the noises heard by all of them.

But McCahill, a simple honest watchman whose record of ten years' service in Cosden's employ speaks for him tells a straightforward story of his movements which establishes that he was below the stairs when the noises were being made. He was, in fact, fussing about with Lady Mountbatten's hot water bottle and the other duties of a watchman on a private estate.

Rises From Page to Stock Broker by Night Study

New York, Jan. 9.—Reeves Taylor, financier at twenty-three, looked just the least bit bored. Being interviewed was such a nuisance.

"There's really nothing to tell," he maintained.

Young Taylor has just been made a member of Tefft, Halsey & Co., a Stock Exchange firm; has purchased a seat on the curb market, and owns a fine farm in Greenwich, Connecticut.

And all this success has come in four years, since he entered the financial world as a page. Studying ticker tape by day and business methods by night did it, he says.

LOST 3 FINGERS ABOARD SHIP; WINS $15,000

New York, Jan. 9.—Jack Burke, nineteen years old, a stevedore, must wait until he becomes of age before he can collect $15,000 damages awarded him for injuries suffered while aboard the Shipping Board steamship West Calumb in Boston Harbor.

Burke, who went ashore to straighten out a shackle on one of the cargo booms, lost three fingers of his left hand when the steam winch stopped suddenly, throwing him upward. His hand was caught in a snatch block and was held there until he was lowered to the deck. The fingers later had to be amputated.

FULLER'S FIRST DAY ON JOB A BUSY ONE

Alvan T. Fuller entered the Governor's chamber at the State House today and assumed active control of the affairs of the Commonwealth.

Promising a business administration, Governor Fuller was "all business" as the day began. He gave brief interviews to the inevitable many who called to wish him well during his term as the State's chief executive.

One problem was foremost on the calendar of the new Governor as he sat at his desk today—the ending of the crime wave which is making its presence felt more and more each day.

Reiterating his inaugural advocacy of the heaviest possible penalties for gunmen, the Governor declared there shall be no place in Massachusetts for the man who unlawfully carries a weapon.

As Governor Fuller took his place at the State House, Channing H. Cox, yesterday morning the State's highest official and today a private citizen, completed his plans to make his departure for California.

$15,000 War Stamp Stolen From Texas State Office

Austin, Tex., Jan. 9.—Discovery that vandals had ransacked the records in the office of the Texas Secretary of State and removed stamps from valuable papers has brought to light the theft of another valuable stamp from the State Land Office.

It was a Confederate stamp, said to be the only one in existence, valued by collectors at between $10,000 and $15,000. Reports that it had been sold in New York for $500 could not be confirmed. The stamp was issued by the postmaster at Hallsville, Tex., during the war.

TESTIMONY IN RUM BRIBERY CASE BEGINS

Introduction of testimony in the trials of Robert Dinsmore, East Boston representative in the State Legislature, and Morris Atdoy, East Boston blacksmith, charged with being accessories to the theft of $300 from Harry Eyer, a bootlegger, was scheduled to begin today in Superior Criminal Court.

Eyer was convicted on a liquor charge and appealed to the Superior Court. It is alleged he sought the aid of the defendants and paid the money to a third person, who has not been arrested, and who posed as District Attorney O'Brien.

WILLETT CASE RETRIAL UP TODAY

Whipple to Oppose Motion for Reopening Suit at Dedham Court

Attorney Sherman L. Whipple will appear in Superior Court today before Judge Callahan to oppose the motion for a retrial in the $15,000,000 suit of George F. Willett against Robert F. Herrick and a group of Boston bankers.

Following the contention of attorneys for the defendants that the verdict rendered by an East Dedham jury which awarded Willett $10,534,109.07, was excessive, Mr. Whipple, who conducted the case for Mr. Willett, will endeavor to show that the amount is only fair. He will also endeavor to show that the trial was fair and that no legal reason exists for a new trial.

Attorney George L. Mayberry, representing one of the defendants, told the court in arguing for a retrial, that the jury erred in fixing the values of the stocks in the various corporations formerly held by Mr. Willett, when the total amount of the verdict was arrived at. He declared that, by the jury, some stocks were figured as being worth over $400 when as a matter of fact some of these shares have been sold for less than $100.

Mr. Mayberry also declared that the jury was influenced in counting wars, which while legal in themselves, resulted in a verdict unfair to the defendants. He declared that a rumor that the defendants were to settle the case for $5,000,000 certainly reached the jurymen's ears and could not have done otherwise than influence them.

CAN'T SEIZE RUM ROW TOWBOAT, SAYS COURT

Reversing the recent ruling of the United States District Court in the case of the government against the Rose Towboat Company of this city, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals has handed down an opinion to the effect that, under customs statutes, the courts cannot forfeit to the Government a tugboat on the ground that it has towed into port a liquor-laden barge.

The towboat Dolphin of the Rose Company was seized after towing a liquor laden barge to a pier at Newton Creek, Brooklyn, N. Y. The Government sought the forfeiture of the tug as an instrument used in violation of the law, and the District Court ordered the towboat forfeited.

PUZZLE RACE ENTERS HOME STRETCH

Only Ten More Days to Go Before $1,000 Prize Will Be Awarded

Over the top to the finish! Ten more puzzles to go! Then the splitting of the $1,000 pot!

Are you going to be in on it? Then don't let up on your drive over the homeward stretch.

The thirtieth set of puzzles in the Boston American Cross-Word Puzzle Contest appears in the forty-nine hence. That will bring the grand cross-word marathon to a close. Packets of solved puzzles will pour from all sections of New England into the hands of the Puzzle Editor. Then his judgment of the winners and the distribution of the $1,000 in cash prizes. Is there any reason why you shouldn't be among them?

Here's the president of a life insurance company in Chicago who says cross-word puzzles put pep in his stenographers and also improve their spelling. He figures that the puzzles have been the cause of increasing the efficiency of his stenographers 25 per cent.

Further, says he:

"Noticing a marked improvement in the speed with which our several hundred stenographers are handling the correspondence, I inquired the reason and found that we had the cross-word puzzle to thank.

"I discovered our stenographers were cross-word enthusiasts and that their idle hours spent over the dictionary had improved their spelling and recognition of words to a startling extent.

"All our executives reported that the stenographers were taking dictation far more rapidly that they were recognizing and handling correspondence words they used to stumble over. We have encouraged our employes to play the game and it whets their minds and improves their speech, as well as increasing their office efficiency."

But Silas Pfingstler, manager of a Tremont street furniture store, has a different story to tell.

Cross-word puzzles have played havoc with the efficiency among his employes. Here's how, he says:

"Cross-word puzzles should be kept at home. If it isn't exchange of home brew recipes, it's radio set accomplishments. If it isn't radio set accomplishments it's how I found a four-letter word meaning an earthquake that doesn't shock. Well, one morning I came into the store and found it practically deserted. I heard voices from the backroom and there I hurried.

"And the sight I met! The salesmen, the office girls, the truckmen and the porter were all kneeling on the floor. A large linoleum rug was under them. It looked like one of those sand storm scenes you see in the films out on a lot in Hollywood. The linoleum had a checkerboard design.

"And the help was busy filling up the squares."

EX-WIFE WOULD HAVE PREVENTED SUICIDE

Superior, Wis., Jan. 9.—Although her husband transferred his affections to another and threatened her life, Mrs. F. X. Bernard, divorced wife of F. X. Bernard, who shot and wounded Miss Laura Palmer, University of Wisconsin instructress, and then killed himself at Madison, would have returned to the father of her children had she known he contemplated taking his life.

"If I had known that he was going to do that, I would have gone back with him to his home," said Mrs. Bernard.

Brilliant Throng at Coming Out Party for Sally Dexter

By Betty Alden

THERE was a crush of fashionables at the Hotel Somerset last night for the ball which Mr. and Mrs. William Endicott Dexter gave to present their debutante daughter, Sally, a prominent bud of the Winter.

She shared coming out honors with Helen Lovering, youthful daughter of the Ernest Loverings of Brookline. Both girls are blonde and petite and both were bright-eyed and thrilled to the core on the important occasion. Sally Dexter's gown was a chic French creation of white satin designed in pale rose, and Helen Lovering was in beaded white net with flying panels of tulle, debutante-like and most becoming.

They received with Mrs. Dexter, who wore a costume of black velvet and tulle, the trio standing before a bower of roses and other blossoms, some of the quantities of flowers sent to the girls in honor of the affair.

Mr. Dexter and some of his confreres—Dr. Channing Frothingham, Mr. Robert Means and Mr. John A. Lowell Hale—were at the head of the large and particularly well turned out usher squad which kept things humming merrily.

The younger men who squire the buds were there as well, young Tudor Simpkins, Nathaniel Thayer, Charlie Barnes, Willis Reed, Columbus Iselin, Frederick Moseley, Austin Lamont, James Otis and Willis Beal, and many others of the masculine persuasion.

MRS. CHANNING FROTHINGHAM, Mrs. Robert Means and Miss Sally Batelle were of the early comers. Mrs. Frothingham in rose velvet, Mrs. Means in an effective treatment of white satin over black and rose, and Miss Batelle in coral brocade with chiffon.

Miss Gertrude Russell, just back from a gay round in New York, was quite a centre of attraction with her fiance, Benjamin F. Rice Bassett. Miss Russell is the daughter of the Richard S. Russells of Commonwealth avenue, and her engagement to the highly connected New Yorker is a distinguished alliance of the present season.

Another just engaged girl for whom there were scores of good wishes was Miss Eleanora Winslow, whose engagement to Leonard Jacob you will remember I told of on Wednesday last. Miss Eleanora and Miss Anna Winslow, sisters and the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George Scott Winslow, wore lovely frocks one canary yellow satin with ostrich and the other amber tinted lace and satin, with a priceless chain of amber beads.

MRS. DAVID SEARS flaunted one of those gorgeously plumed fans in bright orange with her velvet frock, and Mrs. Harold Jefferson Coolidge, always handsomely gowned, carried an enormously long fan of ostrich that combined several colors and matched the rich beadery of the frock.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Woods had with them their daughter, Mrs. Normall Sturgis. Mrs. Woods wore black satin with jetted and sequined net, and the daughter was in pale rose chiffon, smartly designed in beaded bands.

Titian-haired Mrs. Robert H. Stevenson, Jr., wore golden brown silk with flower border. She is a Baltimorean, and the aunt and chaperone of that lively quartette of girls, Katherine, Alice, Rosamond and Elizabeth Thomas. Rosamond made her bow last Winter in Boston and at the Bachelors' Cotillion down in Baltimore. This year she is studying in Rome. The youngest, Elizabeth, is yet a schoolgirl.

EVERYONE was delighted to welcome Juliet Greene, making one of her first appearances of the Winter. All sorts of gay good times had been planned for this lovely daughter of Mrs. Bertram W. B. Greene. She is a May School girl, and holds high place in the bud set. Her formal coming out has been delayed by illness.

Statuesque Elizabeth Fenno came on late from the large dinner which her mother, Mrs. L. Carteret Fenno, gave at the Beacon street house in honor of Phyllis Thompson of New York. Miss Fenno, a brilliant brunette with unusual poise and much charm, wore white satin with tulle, caught here and there with rose buds.

Probably there was none more popular in the handsome ballroom with its garlands of laurel and smilax than the one and only Euphrosyne Sears. Eleonora wore her favorite black, the tunic with furred hem of chinchilla. She is always the centre of an animated group, whether at a function in her native Boston, or in some equally brilliant society set in Palm Beach or San Francisco, London or the South of France.

MISS HELEN LOVERING

Whose wedding will be a large and important function of the late Winter. She is a daughter of the Charles Loverings of Gloucester street.

TEARS IN KID McCOY'S EYES WHEN SENTENCED

Los Angeles, Jan. 9.—Kid McCoy, ex-prizefighter, convicted of manslaughter in connection with the death of Mrs. Theresa W. Mors, was sentenced to from one to ten years in San Quentin prison. McCoy stood up and took the sentence calmly, but there were tears in his eyes as he smiled at the judge and sat down.

PASTOR TO KEEP UP WAR ON LIQUOR

Church Anti-Drys Said to Have Forced Resignation From Malden Pulpit

Malden's fighting pastor, the Rev. John Francis Dobbs, has presented his resignation to the board of trustees of the First Congregational Church. His action is the climax of his long and vigorous campaign against the city's liquor traffic.

The Rev. Dobbs would not say definitely why he resigned, but his act has stirred up a lot of speculation.

Report has it that opposition to the pastor's further service in his church came from forces who had opposed Mayor Devir's election. They objected, so this report goes, to the Rev. Dobbs' rum-traffic suppressing activities in cooperation with the mayor. That made it rather uncomfortable for him, it was said.

The pastor told an American reporter that he had received no office from any other church, nor did he propose to leave Malden. He said he was anxious to stay and continue the work he had begun. If a man had a cause to which he had dedicated himself, the Rev. Dobbs said, he should be ready to fight to the end for it—even, die for it, if necessary, rather than have any one dictate to him what he shall do.

FILM STAR BURNED IN MOVIE STUDIO BLAZE

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 9.—A motion picture studio used for the filming of comedies nearly witnessed a tragedy today when Mildred Davis, actress and wife of Harold Lloyd, was painfully injured in a fire which destroyed an expensive movie set.

She was posing for photographs when the flames, caused by a short circuit, broke out on a nearby stage.

The glass roof overhead was shattered by the heat and flying bits of material cut Mrs. Lloyd's arms in several places.

$100,000 GIFT TO FUND FOR BUILDING CATHEDRAL

New York, Jan. 9.—Bishop William T. Manning of the Episcopal Diocese of New York, announced a anonymous gift of $100,000 to the building fund of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. Bishop Manning said that approximately one-fourth of the $15,000,000 needed to complete the cathedral was assured.

MORE COTTON MILLS CUT WAGES

Rhode Island Manufacturers Order Reduction in Plants

Following closely on the heels of the readjustment of wages in the cotton mills at Fall River, operators throughout New England are taking similar action to be in a position to compete with the Fall River mills on an equal footing.

The employes of the Warren Manufacturing company at Warren, R. I., have been notified that a reduction in wages will be made while a similar notice has been posted at the Parker Mills in East Warren.

The Mount Hope Spinning Company and the Consolidated Thread company plan wage reductions within the next few days.

At the Cocheco mills at East Rochester, N. H. the mills have been placed on a 54-hour a week basis. The employes will be paid for the additional time which was added to speed up production at the plant.

'NOT TRYING TO RUIN SCOTT,' SAYS WIFE

Was Willing to Forgive the Congressman, Declares Mate Who Is Suing

Detroit, Jan. 8 (I.N.S.)—Allegations of Congressman Scott that "jealous malice" caused his wife, Edna James Scott, to make unfounded charges against him and his counsel that males were ridiculed today by Mrs. Scott.

Mrs. Scott is in Detroit recuperating from the strain of her long days on the stand at Albion, Mich., where her suit for divorce is being tried.

"No one knows better than Mr. Scott the truth of my charges," Mrs. Scott said. "No one knows better than Mr. Scott the falsity of the charges against me.

"He charged me with trying to ruin his career in Congress and the careers of his friends. Mr. Scott knows better. When he had left me in 1922 through outside influences, I went to him to try for a reconciliation. I was willing to forgive for the things he had done.

"Had I been at all desirous of ruining Mr. Scott's career, I would have taken an entirely different course. But I knew our troubles were caused by outside influences and tried to save our happiness."

LIFE OF RILEY' OVER, AGAIN HUNTS JOB

Cleveland, O., Jan. 8 (I.N.S.)—Mr. and Mrs. George A. Elwell, feeling pretty again, but glad of it, today took up their life together, after seven months of frenzied spending of a $10,000 prize awarded to Elwell, commercial artist of Youngstown, for naming a popular weekly.

Their troubles culminated this week in Elwell's arrest on a warrant sworn out by his wife charging neglect of his minor children. Then came reconciliation in a courtroom.

"There's only $650 left, but I've got my health and hands," Elwell exclaimed today. "I wish I'd never won a penny of that money."

Mrs. Elwell echoed the sentiment of the family of four children, "Linda" becomes "Yvonne" by the stroke of the pesse agent's pen. Even the girls themselves do not know who the other girls really are.

Right now, in the chorus of Earl Carroll's Vanities, playing in Boston, there is a little girl—only sixteen, shy and pretty. She is known to the other girls and to the public as Lavergne Lambert.

But that is not her name. Her real name, as was disclosed today, quite by accident, is Lavergne Blanc. And the story of her family is an unusual one.

Lavergne has prepared herself for the stage. She says she is going on and on until she really lands somewhere among the stars. And she expects to do this by her wonderful dancing.

But Lavergne's father, Irving R. Blanc, former New York lawyer, newspaper reporter and special writer, is now a lay member of a religious order in the south. His several years ago, gave up his family ties—his two pretty daughters and his attractive wife—and entered the religious college where he is teaching Latin and philosophy, and where he plans to spend the remainder of his life. He has given up the world for religion and the teaching of youth.

"I am mighty proud of my father," said Lavergne, "he is a wonderful character and is doing a noble work. And I am just as proud of my mother, who has dedicated her life to Violet and me."

Father of Stage Beauty Teacher of Religion

One of the pretty girls of Earl Carroll's Vanities who is devoting her life to the stage while her father, former lawyer and newspaper man, retires to the cloisters of a religious order in the South to devote his life to church teaching

LAVERNE LAMBERT

100 SEE B. & M. TRAIN STRIKE PAINTER

Tries to Cross Track at Melrose Highlands; Now Dying

While 100 persons looked on, unable to save him, Arthur S. Rabin, Stoneham painter, stepped into the path of an inbound express at the Melrose Highlands station of the Boston & Maine railroad today. He is dying at the Melrose Hospital.

Rabin, who is forty years old, and lives at No. 24 William street, Stoneham, was on his way to work at the paint shop of Joseph Gibson, nearly opposite the station.

Apparently neither seeing nor hearing the approaching train, which was traveling at high speed, he started to cross the tracks. The engine struck him a glancing blow hurling him a short distance. He was picked up and rushed in an automobile to the hospital where he was found to be suffering from a probable fracture of the skull, a compound fracture of one leg and internal injuries. His chances of recovery are slight.

AUTO SKATERS LOSE LICENSE TO DRIVE

The suspension of the auto licenses of two men today brings to light a new sport, skating on the ice with automobiles.

The licenses of Herbert Hodge of Amesbury and Eber C. Sargent of Haverhill were suspended by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Goodwin for indulging in this sport, which Registrar Goodwin terms a "crazy stunt."

The specific charge against the men was that they were "endangering the lives of other skaters."

According to Registrar Goodwin, motorists who pay the new sport drive their automobiles on the ice of ponds at a fast rate and when in the middle suddenly apply their brakes. The automobile turns around a number of times and finally comes to a stop at the side of the pond.

Hodge's license was suspended for driving on Frog Pond, Newburyport, and Sargent's suspended for driving on Kingsley Pond, Haverhill.

Registrar Goodwin declared that he had received complaints from all parts of the state about the new sport.

PLANES ATTACK IRAK TRIBE AND KILL 50

Bagdad, Irak, Jan. 9 (A.P.)—In consequence of raids recently made by Akhwan tribesmen—followers of the Ibn Saud—of the Irak tribes seventy miles southwest of Nasiriah, a strong force of airplanes located the raiders and attacked them with bombs and machine guns, killing fifty men and many camels.

The British high commissioner has sent a strong note to Ibn Saud to the effect that the raids must cease and the loot be returned, otherwise the raiders will be severely punished in the future.

It is reported that in one foray Ibn Saud's men destroyed every tent belonging to a small Iraqui tribe and killed every male over ten years of age.

SISTER WINS $1,225 IN SUIT AGAINST BROTHER

White Plains, N. Y., Jan. 9 (I.N.S.)—They're on the friendliest terms and always have been. Sarah Selden and her brother, Joseph. They were companions in childhood, played the same games, ate at same table. And now that they're grown the friendship has continued.

But that didn't keep Sarah from suing Joseph for $7,000 when she was thrown through a windshield of the car Joseph was driving last Summer. Mrs. Leah Selden, the mother, sided with her daughter and a jury gave Sarah $1,225.

JEWISH DRIVE BENEFITS BY QUEER WILL

Harry Marcus, Left $10,000 by Stranger, Gives $500 to Fund

It is not only in the movies that men receive inheritances from apparent strangers on the other side of the globe. Harry Marcus of 42 Johnston rd., Dorchester today received a letter from the New York representatives of the English attorneys Booth, Benham and Booth, informing him that Charles Willett of Cape Town, Africa, had bequeathed him $10,000. Mr. Marcus says that he has never seen or heard of Mr. Willett.

Mr. Marcus is the proprietor of a men's furnishing store on Washington st., the proud father of three children, the oldest of whom is a girl of sixteen. His first expenditure from this unexpected inheritance, he says, will be a donation of $500 to the Federated Jewish Charities.

FUND WORKERS MEET.

At an enthusiastic rally at the Elysium Club, attended by more than 100 workers and captains in the Federated Charities campaign, $76,000 in additional subscriptions was reported, making a total of $375,000. Chairman Louis E. Kirstein also reported contributions from radio friends who had listened to the strong appeal of Rabbi Harry Levy at the opening of the campaign.

In an impassioned appeal Judge David A. Lourie urged upon the workers the importance of continuing their work until the full quota of $500,000 was raised. "The welfare of the Jewish community is in your hands, the rehabilitation of hundreds of homes, the molding of character of thousands of children who come to our Jewish Welfare Centres, the making of citizens loyal to our American institutions. Your work is decreasing the number of cases that would come before our criminal courts."

REACHES QUOTA.

The Real Estate, Bankers and Insurance team reported as to have reached their quota, $75,000. The Printing and Stationery team doubled their quota, having raised $8,000. Jacob Margolis reported that though the quota of the Cloaks and Suits team was only $6,500, they had already raised $9,000 and still had many additional members of the trade to solicit.

1925 Girl Better Than Clinging Vine of Old, Says Rector

Modern Woman More Efficient, Says Dr. Prescott After 50 Years' Observation

The girls of 1925, rouge and short skirts to the contrary, are far better young women than the "flappers" of fifty or sixty years ago.

Such is the opinion of Rev. George Jarvis Prescott, who has completed a half-century of service as rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd. By nearly ten years, Rev. Prescott is the senior rector in point of service in one parish in the Massachusetts Episcopalian diocese.

The frivolity and sophistication of our young people should not be a cause of sworry, according to Rev. Prescott.

"Jazz is like the froth of a mountain stream," he said, "It is not the reality of the power, it is only the change. It will soon gather again into the solid stream and carry with it the full responsibilities of life."

PRAISES GIRLS OF TODAY.

The modern girl has more balance, poise, independence and efficiency than the "clinging vine" of fifty years past, he said.

This man who has seen so much of all sides of life does not pose as having a panacea for all the ills of modern times.

"I firmly believe that we now have too much preaching and too little worship," he declared.

It was within the Church of the Good Shepard where Phillips Brooks delivered his last sermon. Like the great leader who was his friend, Rev. Prescott would like to remain and see "the outcome of it all."

Where the age with its wonderful new inventions and trend of advanced thought will lead is something beyond the pall which he would like to live and study.

HOME IS PARAMOUNT.

In the church of today, Rev. Prescott believes, there is too much organization and centralization, and a marked tendency toward commercialism. Like the jazz era, however, these signs are but the froth which mark transition and forward progress.

Paramount of all," he said, is the home with its many present-day advantages. Persons give too little serious thought to marriage. Marriage relations are not held as sacred as they were and that is a great evil, for it leads to the greatest of all present evils—the divorce."

REV. G. J. PRESCOTT.

ARRESTS OF 16

a series of fires throughout the city which police and State officers and insurance company detectives and fire officials declare have been set. Shoe factories, private homes and other buildings have been the scene of the alleged dorkings of the fires.

Fires have been found in private homes, the police say, in which furniture was burned in what the police term "most peculiar circumstances." Oil soaked rags and traces of kerosene oil have been found at other fires which started mysteriously.

It was these bits of evidence that started the police working. As the fires spread throughout the city the police became more convinced than ever that there was an "arson trust" at work, and aid was sent in by State police an other insurance companies. Before the investigation is completed, the police declare there will be many startling sensations.

'JAZZ BANDIT' CAPTURED AT GUN POINT

Riley, the clerk. McDonald ordered him and two customers into a back room, fired a shot into the floor to frighten them, and walked out, unnoticed by Commissioner Wilson and Officer Walkins.

His downfall occurred when he hurried to the Beach street parking space and endeavored to hold up Thomas McLaughlin, in charge of the place. McDonald fired another shot which attracted the attention of Patrolman Walter P. Owens of the Lagrange street station.

Owens, standing at Washington and Beach streets, looked over to the shanty and saw McLaughlin standing with arms raised. He signalled Patrolman Paul F. Halloran, and with pistols in hand, the two officers ran to the parking space.

When they entered the shanty McDonald's boldness left him like air from a pricked baloon. He grovelled to McLaughlin and begged him to tell the "cops" it was all a joke.

At the Lagrange street station McDonald confessed, the police say, to the two holdups, his bravado gone. Later he was identified as the youth who held up and robbed the Schulte store at Essex and Washington streets a week ago.

Also sixteen-year-old John J. Degan, a clerk at the A. & P. store at No. 114 Dorchester street, South Boston, picked McDonald from a lineup at headquarters. The boy said McDonald was the man who, two weeks ago tomorrow night, held up John J. Lynch, manager of the store, and robbed him of $174.20. He was identified by McLaughlin as the man who held him up at the parking space a month ago.

McDonald's home is at No. 5 St. Margaret street, Dorchester, where his parents reside. According to the police he is a typical "cabaret fiend," depending on hold-ups for money with which to enjoy the White Lights.

A number of Atlantic & Pacific store managers who have been held up recently throughout Greater Boston will look him over today.

CLEAN KIDNEYS BY DRINKING LOTS OF WATER

Take Jad Salts to Flush Kidneys if Your Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some forms, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness and bladder irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

MRS. CARLSON LOSES ALL AROUND

Divorced First Husband, Now Sues Second Prospect for $10,000

A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

And if a person is married, the ancient proverb is paraphrased as follows:

A husband in hand is worth two matrimonially doubtful prospects.

A wife known Dan Cupid she has. She doesn't know what she will get if she changes.

Mrs. Linda Carlson of No. 462 Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury, is suing Guy M. Chase of No. 79 Brighton road, Brookline, for $10,000 because he refused to marry her.

She has just learned the truth of the proverb and because it was late in dawning upon her she wants her Brookline swain to pay the expense of a broken heart. She is a masseuse, Chase is an electrician. Divorcing husband No. 1 before she was sure prospect No. 2 was willing to sign his name to a permanent partnership, Mrs. Carlson realizes the fix she is in at present.

"But he'll pay," she says. "He'll pay to mend the wound of my broken heart." Middle-aged and the mother of a grown daughter, Mrs. Carlson feels that she has been spoofed and played with. For which pleasant pastimes Guy W. Chase finds himself the defendant in her $10,000 suit against him, filed in the Suffolk Superior Court.

Samuel Sigliman of Boston is counsel for the woman.

KAROLYI CROSSES SEA, HURRIES TO SICK WIFE

New York, Jan. 9.—Count Karolyi, former President of Hungary, arrived on the Deer Roosevelt, and went immediately to the Post-Graduate Hospital, where his wife, Countess Catherine Karolyi, is ill with typhoid fever.

"My return to Europe depends solely on the condition of the Countess," he said. "I will remain here as long as she needs me." Physicians reported that the Countess' condition was satisfactory. Speaking of his own political fortunes at home, the Count said he had been the target of "reams of lying propaganda."

While it's "coming good" save something every week. That's just plain common sense.

SALEM GIRL IS CALMEST IN SHIP FIRE

Plays Ukulele to Quiet Hysterical Passengers as the Mohawk Burns

Salem, Jan. 9.—When the Clyde line steamer Mohawk was threatened with destruction by fire recently Adeline Peters, pretty nineteen-year-old Salem waitress, prevented a panic by strumming jazzy tunes on her ukulele. Although frightened most to death herself, she calmed her fellow-passengers with the strains of "It Ain't Gonna Rain No Mo'," and other catchy airs.

Miss Peters was one of a group of New England girls on their way South to work at Southern resorts. In a letter to her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Fabian Peters, No. 11 Orchard street, she tells of the horror of being awakened in the early hours when the ship was afire.

"We were ordered to dress and come to the main saloon. Some of the girls were hysterical, and I helped several to dress. I threw some of my belongings in a small bag and grabbed my ukelele. Striking a few chords I soon had half a dozen young fellows around me. While I played they sang and the passengers immediately responded to the situation and sat down and enjoyed the concert."

BOSTON FACES DAMAGE SUITS OVER CANS

The City of Boston faces a heavy damage suit as a result of the Highway Commission granting permission to an outside firm to place its gaudy trash cans on the streets.

Mayor Curley has ordered the cans off the streets, in response to a wave of indignant protests from civic organizations and individuals.

Now comes Julius H. Peck, president of the Spotless Streets Corporation, which owns and placed the cans on the thoroughfares and which holds a contract executed with the Highway Commissioners.

"The public good" is Mayor Curley's ground for ordering the cans off the street.

PAID $100 FOR EACH

Mr. Peck declares, however, that his firm paid $100 each for the 100 cans now on the streets and that an additional 100 cans are in course of preparation.

"In accordance with our contract with the Highway Commissioners, we planned to put 1,000 cans on the streets eventually," said Mr. Peck.

"We secured the contract in good faith—we solicited and secured advertising for these cans. Now, who is to bear this heavy loss?"

It is estimated by Mr. Peck that his firm already has several hundred thousand dollars tied up in the proposition.

The Spotless Streets Corporation has not been officially notified to remove the cans, as yet, but such an order is expected from Mayor Curley within the next day or two.

SUBWAY AS PRECEDENT.

Commenting on the flood of protests over the unsightly appearance of the trash cans, Mr. Peck declared the art work on the cans was done by the students of the leading art schools of Boston.

Mr. Peck cited the subway as public property used for advertising purposes.

Mayor Curley, when told of the possibility of a damage suit against the city, declared the offensive cans would be removed, regardless of what action the corporation owning them may take.

The city will replace the unsightly containers with cans of a more sombre hue, on which will be printed the laws covering the throwing of trash on public highways.

DAIRYMEN OPEN FIGHT ON RAILWAY RATE RISE

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Jan. 9.—The proposed 26 per cent. increase by railroads of rates on milk and cream and other dairy products was vigorously protested in a resolution adopted by the local unit of the New England Milk Producers' Association, and called upon the central headquarters of the association at Boston also to oppose the plan.

The proposed rates, the resolution says, are prohibitive and will ruin the dairy business in Northern Vermont. E. H. Hallett of St. Johnsbury was re-elected president of the local organization and F. E. Johnson was chosen secretary-treasurer.

SPEEDER LEFT WOMAN LYING IN THE STREET

Miss Grace Simonds, twenty-six years old, of No. 40 Bailey street, Dorchester, is in the City Hospital suffering with multiple contusions and abrasions suffered when she was hit by a speeding automobile at Bailey street and Dorchester avenue.

As Miss Simonds started to cross the street, the auto approached at a reckless speed, according to witnesses, and Miss Simonds was struck.

After the accident the driver sped away, leaving the girl unconscious in the street. She was rushed to her home by policemen and later sent to the hospital. It is expected she will recover.

MORE HOUSES PLACARDED IN PROBE

City Officials Continue Inspection of Apartments and Hospitals

Building Commissioner Mahoney, Health Commissioner Mahoney and Assistant Corporation Counsel Schwartz are busy in the South End today, placarding apartment houses found to be fire traps.

In addition, Mr. Schwartz has prepared summonses for more than fifty property owners and will have them in court next week for violating the State laws relating to fire escapes.

A policeman accompanies the inspecting party and where tenants of buildings are found to be improperly safeguarded, the policeman promptly tacks up a placard announcing the fact.

A list of the houses placarded is being furnished the police station of the district where the buildings are located and the police have been instructed to arrest the owners of property where the cards are removed.

$130,000 Fee Agreed on by Lawyers for Franks' Slayers

Chicago, Jan. 9.—Clarence S. Darrow and other attorneys who defended Richard Loeb and Nathan F. Leopold, Jr., for the kidnaping and slaying of Robert Franks, have agreed with the families of the youths to accept $130,000 for their services, says an announcement by the Chicago Bar Association, which endorsed the settlement as fair.

No announcement was made as to how the fee was to be divided between the attorneys.

Dies in Store

The body of Isaac C. Hanson, fifty-two, of No. 80 High street, Stoneham, was identified at the Northern Mortuary where it had been removed after the man collapsed in a store at No. 580 Washington street.

$50 IS MAXIMUM BACK PAY OF "L" MEN

Fifty dollars will be the maximum received by employes of the Boston Elevated Railway Company in the distribution of $280,000 back pay which is being made today, according to officers of the Carmen's Union.

Some of the men only will receive a few cents, it is understood.

The payments are being made as the result of an award by Judge McLaughlin last October which granted the carmen and miscellaneous employes of the company an increase of two and one-half cents an hour, retroactive to July 1.

MEXICO WANTS U. S. TO SEND BACK PLOTTERS

Mexico City, Jan. 8.—The Mexican government will request the extradition from the United States of numerous Mexicans who are said to be plotting against the Mexican government. Dr. Cuthbert Hinojosa and Rafael Zuberman are named as leaders of a group who are plotting to start a new movement. El Sol states that the members of the group are now at Los Angeles where they have established headquarters in order to organize rebel elements.

Get through the winter without a cold!

Zippy air, exercise, the right kind of food, enough sleep—well, I keep telling you I love winter. But when we become run down, our resistance is lowered—we are all set to "catch cold."

Colds are caused by germs. Remove the cause. That's the way I look at it.

They're all about in winter—these dangerous, invisible germs—on almost everything your hands touch. Be rid of them quickly before they get into your nose or mouth—or what is worse, pass to your children.

Keeps hands antiseptically clean

Wash them often—and in the right way. To look clean is not enough. Know that they are purified. Take the precaution to keep your skin free of germs and you'll be healthier and happier. That's the experience of users of Lifebuoy Health Soap—they have that confident feeling of being antiseptically clean after washing or bathing.

Washing hands and face frequently with Lifebuoy is your surest everyday protection—your best chance to get through the winter without a cold.

Jolly weather for well folks...Winter air paints roses on healthy cheeks.

One general Lifebuoy is the cause of good health, fresh skin, white teeth, sparkling eyes, vitality and freedom from B. O. Lifebuoy because you like cleanness.

Delicate skin kept soft and smooth all winter

Millions have learned that regular use of Lifebuoy protects skin from the harshness and chapping caused by poor soap and by natural skin oils being drawn from hands and face by overheated houses and dry winter air.

The pure, soothing oils of palm fruit and cocoanut in Lifebuoy cleanse without removing the natural oils of the skin.

Clark Declares He Will Kayo Boyle

Lynn gets back on the boxing map next Monday night when the famous A. C. stages a return bout between Bobby Clark of Salem and Johnny Boyle of Lynn. Although Boyle whacked Clark several weeks ago he is more than pleased as he feels Salem lad again. He declares that Clark is the hardest hitter that he has ever faced.

Clark has been training for past two weeks in the hope that he would get a return battle with Boyle, and now that match has been cinched he is more than pleased as he feels he believes he is the master of the Lowell fighter and says he will keep up the record he has established at the Lynn club of coming back and knocking out every boy who has ever won a decision over him.

White Sox and Phils After Same Twirler

Chicago, Jan. 9—Baseball Commissioner Landis has been asked by the Chicago White Sox to decide whether Pitcher O'Neill of the Beaumont Texas Club belongs to the Sox or to the Philadelphia Nationals.

Radiotrons with these model numbers are only genuine when they bear the name Radiotron and the RCA mark.

Listening to real music—listening to undistorted voice—getting what you want when you want it. That's what the fun comes in, in radio.

The tubes cannot do the whole job. Other good parts are of little avail without the best tubes. Everybody knows this. Most people do ask for RADIOTRON by name, and watch to see that they get what they ask for. For the very best reception your set can give—no matter what type of tube you need—look for the Radiotron name, and the RCA mark.

Bobbie and His Pa

By William F. Kirk

LAST nite I was trying to grate a lemon on the lem-grater & I grated my Nuckels instead & I bee gan to cry.

Poor little man, sed Ma. Let me see your hand.

I wasnt baby Bobbie too much, sed Pa. Let him lern to grin & bare pane.

Sure yure pane is silenta, Bobbie, sed Pa.

I mean last nite wen you had a tooth ake you wasent very silent, I said. You was rore-ing around here all the evening, I sed.

I will give you something besides a scratched Nuckel to cry about, young man, sed Pa.

You will not touch him with wile he is suffering, sed Ma. Here that is mine, sed Ma

It will be all rite after a wile, I guess, I sed, & wen the pane stops I will finnish grate-ing that lemon, I sed.

You see, husband, sed Ma, what a wair littel man Bobbie is. He is willing to run the risk of gitting hurt & grate just to help me. There will be a quarter N

For Mary, sed Ma

Out of my pocket, of course sed Pa. In other words, because I gave you some money, some sort of it will be my fault

You are not very simpathetik tonite, it seems to me, sed Ma. I was reeding a artikel the other day in wich it sed that al trewly grate men had tender harts.

That is so, sed Pa, & I am jest all soury for Bobbie as you are, sed Pa. I am gruff on the surfiss, sed Pa, but down under there is to much tender hart in this wurld than my hart, sed Pa. You ought to know that, wife, sed Pa.

Then why do you tease Bobbie wen his littel hand is hurt? sed Ma.

To mak him a Spartin, sed Pa, to teech him to stand the hard Nocks of this here wurld, sed Pa.

What rubberish, sed Ma.

You bet Ma knows what chil-lern needs, Pa thinks al they need is three (3) meels a day & sum skool books & close to ware, but kids need sympathy. Seeshully if thare dads ram them wen they git hurt. My littel man Bobbie is going to bed now,

All But Peggy

One by one the Sheridan boys and girls, with a single exception of Peggy, the odd second born, married and went about the business of home making. Peggy looked upon love as a silly, fascinating hallucination; marriage as a prolonged bondage, for which the golden wedding circlet was but the badge of servitude.

She was still of this opinion when Robert Cunningham dropped into town and telephoned a greeting to his old friend Bud Truax. Bud invited him out to dinner. Mrs. Sheridan being out of the city, Peggy was obliged to play hostess.

"If he weren't your friend, Bud, I'd never do it," Peggy insisted with a negative toss of her pretty blonde head. "Men are sure to arrive at the stage where they are whispering eulogies to my left shoulder blade before the evening ends, but some how I know you won't harbor any thing so banal in a friend."

"Ah, Bobs all right," Bud assured

Loves an Argument

Peggy, alone, I could keep off the subject for one whole evening! I should say not. Name one your friend. I love an argument."

The Independents were a club of girls who, although not sworn to celibacy, frowned as disinfinitely upon wedlock as did Peggy Sheridan, their president. They believed in public life for women; studied parliamentary law, up-to-date business methods, personal efficiency and salesmanship.

When the club was organized they made one hard and fast rule, which so far had never been broken. No member who was known to be entertaining the slightest leaning toward the eternal snare-ling was allowed to remain one of the Independents. To begin with, none of them were supposed to believe in men, and more than that, home and husband would sadly interfere with a member's club life, as there were one or more dinners every week, given as often in the members' homes as at the club quarters, and no one but members was ever allowed to attend.

When Bob Cunningham and Peggy Sheridan met, each found the other good to look upon. Contrary to Bob's summary of his guest, Bob was very tolerant toward his new chum-in-law, more than a little interested, which made another bond between them.

By the time Bob had bought the interest in the law firm which he had come to purchase and hung out his shingle he was being seen with Peggy Sheridan enough to cause a little comment among the gossips of the town.

Boldness Grew

Then Peggy began to speak of him occasionally at club meetings—diffidently at first, but with growing boldness. Finally the Independents were thrown into chaotic upheaval one day, when their president called a meeting to announce her engagement and to ask that a special dispensation be arranged whereby she might retain her membership after marriage.

"You see," she argued blithely, "it isn't as though Bob were like other men. He's so different—so much like one of us and it is absolutely agreed between us that nothing in our combined lives shall interfere with the individuality of either of us. We're to keep the pet ideals of each safe and sacred from the prying eyes and questioning lips of each other—just as marriage should be, if it is to be at all."

After much discussion, Peggy's retention as president of the Independents was finally made unanimous. She and Bob were quietly married and took up housekeeping in a cozy little bungalow of their own. For months Peggy never missed a meeting, and kept a watchful eye over her domain, allowing her social life to go entirely by the board.

Then one day Bob came home at three o'clock to find Peggy in bed with a headache. Nothing like it had ever happened before, and Bob was very much alarmed. He called the doctor, who pronounced it a severe nervous breakdown and ordered complete rest and quiet. Bob was told that Peggy must not be disturbed in any way, and that she must not be allowed to worry over anything, however trivial.

Bob was in a terrible state of mind. He loved Peggy devotedly, and the thought that she was ill and worrying over something was more than he could bear. He sent for Peggy's mother, who had come to town with Peggy when she married, and asked her what he should do.

"Why, I don't know," Mrs. Sheridan said. "Peggy has been so worried about the club lately. She has been president for two years, and it has been a great responsibility. She has been afraid that she would not be able to keep the girls together, and that they would all get married and leave her."

Rift in the Lute

The rift in the lute of this order and regularity came the night Peggy was obliged to pass up a club meeting because of a relative's birthday party. She was just leaving the party when she received a telephone message asking her to come to Independents house at once.

When she arrived at the clubhouse, the Independents with but one exception, Peggy and Lillas Laughlin, a girl who had not attended at all regularly for some time, were sitting around the room with long faces and puckered brows.

"We asked you to come, Peg," the appointed spokesman began, "to tell you some things we think you ought to know. By the way, was your husband with you as the party?"

"Why—er—no," stammered the astonished president. "He had an important meeting on at his office."

"Exactly. It is about that and similar meetings that we wish to speak. We made an exception to a very strict rule when we allowed you to retain your membership here after marriage, Peggy. Now we think it only due the honor and integrity of the club that you speak to the husband acquired through that marriage, about his disgraceful conduct. He has been flirting openly with Lilias Laughlin, whom we voted to

Soul of Honor

"You lie!" thundered the indignant president and wife. "My husband is the soul of honor. I shall go to his office at once and see for myself. Let no one dare follow me. I am perfectly capable of handling the situation myself. If I find you are right I shall resign at once!"

She flew down the steps and hailed a cab. Inside the chauffeur took all speed laws if need be to rush her to the law offices of Baker, Byrd Cunningham. As she stopped outside the closed door of Bob's private room her heart almost stopped beating for the silvery tinkle of a woman's laughter had floated out to her.

She had never realized until that awful moment what it would mean to her to lose Bob. Could it be that after all she had done and said and thought she was going to be just like other women with husbands?

Ah! Again laughter—a girl's voice—Bob's rich, deep tones in answer. It took every atom of will power she possessed to open that door, but she finally made it and stepped into the room, lips set, eyes flashing.

There at a table sat her husband, her uncle, Bud Truax, Lilias Laughlin and Lilias' elderly aunt, all engaged in a friendly game of cards.

"Peggy!" Bob cried out, when he saw her white face.

Peggy raised her hand protestingly, as though to halt his progress toward her. "Bob," she said bitterly, "if you had to do this sort of thing, why need you have bred scandal by coming here? Why didn't you invite your

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

NOW is the original "White Christmas" when all the bills start fluttering under the door.

YOU get all kinds of little white lakes. They start with a flurry from the five-and-ten, and end up with a blizzard from the jeweler's.

THOUSANDS of fathers all over the country are wishing they had named Santa Claus for a bottle of chloroform.

THE yuletide season is always full of joy. The suffering doesn't come until the first of the month.

WE have safe and sane Fourth of July, but what we need most is pullbox Christmases.

THE collection agencies should "lay it with other."

SANTA CLAUS could give us cheaper holidays if he'd let us have our presents on the cash-and-carry plan.

CHRISTMAS Eve should be C. O. D.

OUR houses ought to be equipped with pay-as-you-enter chimneys.

THERE should be at least six or seven Kris Kringles so that we could pick out the cheapest one.

SOME families still own Santa Claus for 1923.

NOW is the time that a husband who's wife gave him a watch for Christmas finds out how much it cost.

AND nine times out of ten he has to take it back and exchange it for some meat and potatoes.

ONE woman surprised her husband on Christmas with a solid gold chain. But the real surprise came this week.

THE average man is surprised in December and shocked in January.

IT doesn't seem right that he should wear a three hundred dollar chain across a four dollar chest.

THE most useful present that you could give to father would be a pulmotor to help him get his breath.

THE holidays are now over. People who prayed for a "White Christmas" are now looking forward to a dark January.

FAMOUS FIRSTS

By Mark Stuyvesant

AMONG the greatest boons to humanity, and not least among the potent agents of civilization, is the ice-making machine.

To dwellers in the temperate zone this may seem a broad statement, but nothing has done so much to make the tropics habitable as the ice machine.

During the Winter in the temperate zones, the ice of the ponds and rivers was cut and was available during the short, hot Summer. Enterprising captains occasionally took shiploads of ice to the tropics, where the sold it for huge prices, but as most of their ice had evaporated during the long voyages, their net profit was not worth counting.

Today the tropics offer few terrors to a traveler, so even to a year-round resident. Artificial ice lowers the temperature of sleeping-rooms. It makes fruits cold enough to be agreeable and to relieve the thirst provoked by heat. Ice packs reduce fever and in a multitude of other ways modify the effects of heat on the human system.

The first machine to produce ice by purely mechanical means was the invention of Dr. William Cullen in 1755. This pioneer ice machine was followed by the invention of Jacob Perkins, an American then resident in London, who obtained patents in England on an ice-making machine in August, 1834.

However, Dr. John Gorrie, of Apalachicola, Florida, obtained the first American patent on an ice-making machine. This was issued to him in May, 1851, with letters patent to run from August, 1850.

The first machine to perfect the manufacture of ice on a commercial scale was the invention of a Frenchman, Ferdinand P. E. Carre, to whom the United States granted patents in 1859—seven years before his own government issued patents to him.

In Europe, ice-making machines were used for many years before they were utilized to any great extent in the United States. The Writers of the British Islands, France and Italy are so cold that very little ice forms on the rivers and ponds, while the cold Winters in America provide an abundant natural ice supply.

BEDTIME STORY

Broadcast Daily Through WNAC

HOW WOODCOCKS CARE FOR THEIR YOUNG

By Foxy Grandpa

IT was toward evening when Bobby, Bunny and I were on our way home. We were on a trip through the north of England and were stopping at a little inn in a small town.

It was a beautiful spring day, and as the shadows fell and lengthened we heard many birds singing their evening song before they went to bed.

The lane led us through a forest, and such a chorus you never heard. every little feathered fellow seemed to be twittering his very best twitters.

Suddenly Bunny stopped and pointed to the side of the road ahead of us. There were a pair of birds with their heads thrown back and wiggling their throats.

"What are they doing?" while piped Bobby. "Gargling?"

I had to laugh, for those birds did look for all the world as if they were gargling. Then Bunny said:

"Gargling their supper of worms."

And at that moment we saw both the lady and gentleman—for we learned they were a married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Woodcock—thrust their long bills into the earth, pull out two long wriggling worms, throw their heads back and swallow them.

"Certainly looks as if they enjoy them," said Bobby.

Then off they flew.

"Wonder where their nest is?" said Bunny.

"Let's come out tomorrow and see," said Bobby.

"All right," said I, "but just now let's go home. I feel as hungry as those Woodcocks and I'm sure they'll have crumpets for tea."

The mention of crumpets hastened Bobby's steps and soon we were at the inn in front of the fire, eating toasted crumpets with strawberry jam on them.

The next day we walked out again, and as it happened we found the tree where the Woodcock couple lived. When they flew away Bobby climbed up and looked into the nest. There were four little eggs laid as neatly as you please, with the small ends meeting in the centre.

"I'd love to see the babies when they hatch out," said Bobby.

"Perhaps we will have luck and see them some day," ventured Bunny hopefully and wiggling his left hind lucky foot.

We did have luck and several weeks after that when we were coming home at twilight whom should we see picking at the ground but Mr. and Mrs. Woodcock! And as we came nearer whom should we see with them but their four children!

"Look!" gasped Bobby. "Aren't they cute?"

"Pretty young to fly, I should think," I said.

"They can't fly yet," answered Bunny.

"Then how did they get down here?" I asked.

"You'll see in a moment," answered the wise Bunny.

We stood quietly by and watched the happy family digging their supper out of the ground and gobbling it up greedily.

Then they stopped eating and I saw something which simply took my breath away.

The father Woodcock took one of the babies between his feet and then the mother did the same, and off they flew to their nest. In a moment they returned, picked up the other two children and flew back to the nest with them.

"What do you think of that!" whispered Bobby in amazement.

"Smart birds," said Bunny, "even if their big eyes do give them a stupid appearance."

"Very few flying creatures are stupid, I find," said I as we moved on.

CHILDSPIRIT KILLED

By Carolyn Lisberge

Lecturer and Writer on the Training and Education of Children

I KNOW a grandmother who is raising her son's motherless child as her ward. The youngster, aged seven, is nervous and delicate.

He needs to be left to his own devices, which in his case take the form of absorbed playing of some game of the imagination requiring few toys.

But the elderly lady nags him in most babyish fashion. She never permits him to lose himself in any of his dramas but interrupts him continuously to give him orders.

"Don't do this or don't do that."

If she notices that his fingernails have been filled with dirt from making mudpies in the garden she sends him forthwith to wash them, thus interrupting the continuity of his play at a time when it is important for his development that he learn to concentrate on his task.

Then, my talks with him I gather that his spirit needs trips to the wharves, to watch the ships come into the harbor, or to the train sheds to see locomotives coming and going. But his grandmother says: "The last around the house was a wide enough playground for his father and so it should be for him."

As I see it, her aim is to make him a commonplace, conventional gentleman, city "broke."

Whereas my chats with the boy have convinced me he is a thinker along his own lines, who ought to be encouraged to express his adventurous desires and be fitted to become a mining engineer or prospector.

But the grandmother draws herself up rigid at my suggestion that his staring and the wide range of his interest be given further outlet.

"I brought up my own son to be a leader among men, not a vagabond," she answers promptly. "He was just made president of the bank. And I believe I am right in rearing his son along the same lines."

Alas, we all believe we are right. The idea, however, is to be sure we are right. The way to find out is to compare notes with other parents and make a study of the proposition of child rearing, and not to shut the rest of the world out.

Our Own Watson Is Investigating This Tribute to the Power of the Press

(From the American)

It was the worst earth shock since March 21, 1904, the day the Boston American made its initial bow to the public, when persons aroused from sleep by the tremor rushed to the safety of the streets.

Nothing in the vegetable kingdom grows as rapidly as liquor plants.

SCOOP

This is the first action picture of the recent earthquake. Our alert photographer, hearing that plenty of firms were shaky, was in the business district. Stalking fiercely with the airy nonchalance of the kind, he followed an insurance agent into the office of a business man who had just opened the Christmas bills.

"Can I interest you," the invader started. The modern business man is keen and alert. He wastes no time. This one responded. His language rattled the pictures off the walls. The panes cracked in the windows, and even the stenographer, a modern girl, put her hands over her ears. Our alert photographer snapped the scene, for his series on Intimate Peeks at Business Barons. And so it developed that he had a news beat. On such little things do great matters hinge, or something like that.

EXPLANATION

The kind of stuff they're turning out,
That's just distilled or fake,
Has paralyzed the nation and,
Of course, it has to shake.

PEEPUL'S VOICE

MRS. GUZZLE

Dear Sir—I imagine I was the first to greet them with an earthquake. Quakes was at breakfast. I was starting to use the razor on coffee cup to be sure of without spilling a drop. Usually at least half goes down the drain while and on the tablecloth. So I realized that the whole house was trembling, and instead of restraining Hector's normal morning whistling.

"There's something wrong with the world," I exclaimed.

"Ain't you the original old thing," he replied, laughingly.

I am prepared to forward affidavits of this unique experience to Professor Arno Reverie or any scientific society that cares to investigate. I remain, sincerely yours,

Cod Liver Oil in Sugar Coated Tablets For Puny Kids

Ask Your Druggist for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets

Forget the nasty tasting, stomach upsetting cod liver oil and give the thin, puny, under-developed children McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets if you want to give them a good appetite and put pounds of good, healthy flesh on their bones.

Doctors know all about them and so do all good pharmacists all over America, for they are in great demand, because they are not laggards but show results in a few days.

They are not expensive either—60 tablets—60 cents—and children take them like candy.

A very sickly child, age 9, gained 12 pounds in seven months and is strong and healthy.

One skinny woman gained 9 pounds in 24 days.

Never Let a Cold Get a Start

Vapors Check a Cold Overnight

There are many ways to treat a cold, but only one DIRECT way—with vapors that can be inhaled.

Vapors penetrate immediately into every corner of the air passages and lungs, soothing and healing with every breath.

Vicks is so remarkably successful in treating cold troubles because it acts like "a vapor lamp in salve form."

When rubbed over throat and chest the body heat releases vapors of Menthol, Camphor, Eucalyptus, Thyme and Turpentine. At the same time Vicks is absorbed through and stimulates the skin like a poltice or plaster.

This double, direct action often checks the worst cold overnight.

After months of suffering
Baby's skin trouble healed in one week

South Hills, Pittsburg, Pa., March 22d.—"I certainly bless the day I started to use Resinol Soap and Ointment. I tried for four or five months to cure my baby of a skin and scalp trouble—tried nearly everything—but nothing did any good. Finally, a neighbor recommended Resinol and after using the soap and ointment on baby for three days, all the scabs fell off and in one week's time the trouble was entirely cured. I will never be without them. My husband uses the Resinol Shaving Stick—he thinks it's the best he ever used." (Signed) Mrs. J. J. Baumgarten, Box 258—R. D. #3.

LEVENSON GETS READY TO SERVE 2-YEAR TERM

Harry Levenson, Boston attorney, is preparing today to begin service of a two-year term in prison on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses after Lid Supreme Court Justice Crosby denied his objections and after his trial.

Levenson, who turned State's evidence in the trial of William J. Corcoran, Daniel H. Coakley and others in the so-called "blackmail" cases, was convicted of receiving $4,000 from Coakley as "fix" a charge of receiving stolen goods.

It was claimed that Levenson paid over $1,800 of the $4,000 to Senator Corcoran. It was alleged he obtained $200 additional from Linegar. His was sentenced by Judge Hannahan, but exceptions of the sentence was deferred pending the result of his appeal.

THE VALUE OF SPINACH AND SOME RECIPES

THERE are some of us who know that spinach is valuable in the diet, but I truly believe that the reason more of us do not eat it is because so often we are expected to eat our "peck of dirt" in one single portion of the greens. Why not be a little gritty spinach! Personally, I've taken to the canned spinach in preference to the fresh. I find that the best brands cannot be told from fresh and are absolutely free from grit.

But if you are using the fresh vegetable, a good rule is to wash it first in hot water and then in cold and now you think you have washed it a sufficient number of times, wash it once more for luck. Then you can be rather proud, put it in a colander and hold it under the cold water faucet just long enough to rinse well.

Now for the recipes:

Four—

RECIPE NO. 804.
SCALLOPED SPINACH.
1 cup cooked spinach.
1 cup dried bread crumbs.
1 cup American cheese.
2 tablespoonfuls butter.
½ teaspoonful salt.

Chop the spinach and add the salt. Butter a baking dish in layers of spinach, cheese and crumbs in a baking dish which has been buttered, and have your last layer of crumbs. Dot with butter and bake 15 minutes in a hot oven. This amount will serve four persons.

RECIPE NO. 805.
ITALIAN SPINACH.

Boil the spinach and chop fine. Mix with grated cheese in proportion of four tablespoonfuls of cheese to a quart of spinach; season with salt and paprika and moisten with one beaten egg for each quart of spinach. Put this mixture into flat cakes the size of fish cakes. Roll in fine crumbs then in a beaten egg mixed with two tablespoonfuls of water, then in crumbs again. Brown the cakes slowly in deep fat or in a frying pan. Lay the cakes on a hot platter and surround with seasoned tomato sauce. Garnish with stuffed eggs.

RECIPE NO. 806.
SAVORY SPINACH.

½ peck spinach.
½ cup butter.
4 olives lemon.
41 hard cooked egg.
1 tablespoonful salt.
1 tablespoon fine breadcrumbs.
Few grains nutmeg.
½ teaspoonful salt.

Wash spinach thoroughly, add salt and boil it gently for 15 minutes without adding water; then chop it very fine. Dice the bacon and fry it, and when well browned add the onion and fry until it is browned onion in the bacon and then add to the spinach. Put the breadcrumbs and flour into the remaining fat and when they brown pour the mixture over the spinach, adding enough water to make a grating of gravy. Let it boil for a few minutes and serve garnished with hard cooked eggs in slices.

RECIPE NO. 807.
ITALIAN SAVORY.

Clean or cook in its own juice one half peck spinach, drain and chop very fine, add one egg with salt and pepper, a suggestion of sugar and a liberal amount of butter or oil, as preferred. Place a layer of this seasoned spinach about two inches thick in a buttered glass baking dish, over this grate cheese thickly and cover with 3 or 4 hard cooked eggs sliced. Make a cupful of white sauce and pour over the spinach. Grate cheese on the top and bake in the oven a hot oven. If desired bread crumbs may be used instead of cheese.

Fires in Private Hospitals

Mayor Curley Stresses the Importance of Sprinklers—Other Necessities Would Appear to Include Fire-Escapes, the Thawing Out of Frozen Hydrants and the Installation of Fire-Alarm Boxes Not Quite So Intricate as the Dudley-Street Terminal

The Mayor of Boston has moved with commendable promptness to remove ONE of the menaces to life revealed by the fire last Sunday afternoon in a private hospital on Beacon street.

Just as the burning of the Iroquois Theatre led to the general use of the asbestos curtain, and just as the trampling to death of little children in a Collingswood, O., schoolhouse led public authorities to provide similar buildings everywhere with doors which open outward, so the destruction of Scobey Hospital will lead to the better protection of the sick in other institutions of the same character.

Mayor Curley will ask the present Legislature to enact a law requiring private hospitals, places of public assemblage, public and private schools, homes for the aged and tenement houses more than three stories high, to be equipped with automatic sprinklers.

Meanwhile, the Mayor will refuse, he says, to renew the licenses of any private hospitals which are not so equipped. The existing licenses expire in April.

Every thoughtful citizen will endorse this attitude of the Mayor.

There remain, however, two or three other questions of importance:

1—How are we going to be certain, in the future, that fire hydrants are not frozen when most desperately needed?

2—Isn't it time the great city of Boston was supplied with fire-alarm boxes of such simple arrangement that in the moment of necessity they can be operated by man, woman or child?

3—How many more Boston hospitals three stories high, with wards on the top floor, are WITHOUT fire-escapes?

The public officials whose duty it is should look into these things NOW. If they are NOT attended to, after the lesson of Sunday last, the people of Boston will remember it.

Need Real Attorney General

All Suspicion of Special Privileges Should Be Done Away With

The most important office President Coolidge is called upon to fill is that of Attorney-General of the United States.

This is true because this country's attitude toward law enforcement is so anomalous that the personal viewpoint of the Attorney-General is all important.

If the United States actually stood for the enforcement of all laws, there are thousands of lawyers competent to serve as Uncle Sam's chief prosecutor, but the United States does not stand for this, no matter how loudly we may shout for the common people to manifest a reverence for law and order.

For some time the enforcement of law in this country has been a "matter of administrative discretion." That is, succeeding administrations have glanced over the statutory menu card and selected the statutes they desired served to the people of the United States, and those they wished kept in the icebox.

Everybody has known this, and through the years it has added no small amount to the disrespect for law which common people have.

This decision to enforce or suspend statutes has had peculiar reference to business crimes and the ordinary crimes committed by those of great influence. With this in view the selection of an Attorney-General for the United States always has had the close scrutiny and usually the "helpful suggestions" of the vested interests.

We now enter upon a period of reaction. The vote last November has been regarded by the vested interests as a vote of emancipation from legislative interference and a grant of greater freedom.

President Coolidge has spoken in no uncertain terms regarding the paramount importance of law enforcement and the priceless value of popular faith in governmental honor.

In the selection of the Attorney-General to succeed Mr. Stone, he has an opportunity to name one whose recognized devotion to a square deal, such a man as Judge Kenyon, for instance, would aid the cause of law enforcement more than a thousand meetings which pass high-sounding resolutions and then adjourn.

At this time, when the statistics of crime alarm all who think, we should divorce the national government from all suspicion of granting special privileges to anyone.

The people have confidence in President Coolidge. They hope he will name an Attorney-General whose record and personality will be a pledge to the American people that there will be no parking zones in the criminal laws from the privileged few.

Aroostook Potatoes

Never Any Better Than This Year. Seldom, If Ever, So Cheap. If Possible, Buy Them by the Barrel

If the farmers of the State of Maine are unable to dispose of the great stocks of potatoes they have on hand thousands of them will be unable to pay their bills and many of them will lose their farms.

An almost certain consequence of such a calamity will be that next year's crop of Maine potatoes will be so small that the price will soar and some city folk will be compelled to go without.

There are 41,000,000 bushels of potatoes in Maine ready for shipment to those who want them.

Plain common sense, manifest self-interest, says, "Buy potatoes and buy them NOW!"

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By HELEN ROWLAND

NOW, my Daughter, there dwelt a woman in Babylon, unto whom men were as the rings upon her hands and garlands in her hair, and the number of her devotees was the envy of all other women.

But, when I questioned her concerning the secret of her charm, she answered me, saying:

"Verily, oh, Mother, it is no magic whereby I have learned to get men going—and to keep them calling. For, lo, my recipe is simpler than a Monday dinner and plainer than the answer to yesterday's Crossword Puzzle.

"Behold, I am neither exceeding young nor passing beautiful and my 'vamping' is but second-rate. Alas, as a sweetheart and a sinner I am no shining light!

"Moreover, as a wife I should be but a sorry failure. For my cooking is deadly, and as a mender of socks I am the World's Worst Bet.

"Likewise, as a chum, I am less than nothing. For, my bridge causeth men to tear their hair, and my golf causeth them to weep, and in none of their pastimes, am I a little playmate.

"Yet, this is my secret.

"Behold, I was born with the MOTHER-instinct, which is the gift of girls!

Helen Rowland

"Lo, the humoring and soothing and soliciting of men is unto me a joy, a life-work, and a fine art.

"I delight to hear them TALK of themselves and am not bored with their confidences and their boastings.

"When they tell me of their achievements and triumphs, I rejoice with them and sing their hallelujahs.

"When they tell me of their sorrows and defeats I understand them and yearn over them, and my heart bleedeth for them.

"When they confide in me their heartaches and their love-problems, I advise and hearten them, and am all sympathy.

"When they reveal to me their secret hopes and dreams and ambitions, I applaud and inspire them.

"Their problems are my problems, their sufferings my sufferings, and their triumphs my delight! For lo, I am the Eternal Mother, unto whom all men are as beloved sons.

"Therefore, do they gather about me, and cling unto me, and find in me a RELIEF from all other women!

"Verily, a man may delight in a sweetheart, and rejoice in a chum, and cherish a wife—but NO man can live without a MOTHER!"

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

SNOW is falling swiftly where the north wind strays, white as lily petals of the Summer days. Wan old Winter wanders down the garden aisles where no poppy blushes, where no jasmine smiles. Winter in the garden while the tempests scream walks along these closes where the roses dream. Lonely are the alleys that with song were rife, yet a vagrant whisper tells the garden in a cloak of snow, but the brown seeds slumber, waiting far below. And with Spring's returning wrens will come to nest, buttercups will frolic on the green hill's crest. Winter in the garden holds those sweets in trust, till the May comes, calling violets from dust. Whiter than the lilies, shining snow —flowers gleam in the garden bowers where the roses dream. Yet a whisper travels down those stricken aisles: April comes in visions and the jonquil smiles!

THE MYSTERY OF SHADOWED BAND

By Garrett P. Serviss,
Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topic of Popular Interest

THERE is a somewhat mysterious phenomenon connected with total eclipses of the sun which may be visible during the eclipse of January 24, and which, since it requires no instruments for its observation, may be caught sight of by anyone who has been warned of its existence and instructed how to watch for it.

I speak of the remarkable apparition called "the shadow bands."

These appear a little before the last gleaming edge of the sun disappears behind the advancing globe of the moon, and again a little after the opposite edge of the sun bursts into sight behind the still advancing moon.

They are to be seen on the ground, but especially on buildings, walls, etc. A snow slope close at hand might exhibit them well, but it is better to look at the side of a white or light-colored building that faces the direction of the sun.

They appear, just before, perhaps a few minutes before, the complete disappearance of the sun, and the proper moments for expecting them are graphically indicated by our cut. When the still uncovered edge of the sun has become an exceedingly thin crescent about to vanish, you may look for the shadow bands.

If you are fortunate enough to see them (for they are noticed at every eclipse), they will produce an effect "like sunlight reflected upon a wall from a surface of rippling water." That is the picturesque description given by Mrs. Mabel Loomis Todd, witness, together with her husband, Professor David Todd, of a great many total solar eclipses.

In the two previous eclipses that I have witnessed, that of 1900 in South Carolina, and that of 1905 in Spain, I did not see any shadow bands, the reason being, perhaps, that I was too intent upon watching for the outburst of the corona, which comes almost instantly after the last gleam of sunlight vanishes.

But the two phenomena are separated by a distinct interval of time, and it is worth while giving a moment or two to an attempt to catch sight of the bands. With a hand camera all prepared it ought to be easily possible to photograph them.

Various explanations of the cause of these curious [illegible] have been offered. Professor [illegible] proposed them to be due to [illegible] tations in the edge of the [illegible] duced by the sun [illegible] —streak of [illegible] through the [illegible] cloths.

It is known that [illegible] which is an optical [illegible] of the sun at the moment [illegible] pearance, into many [illegible] tions, is caused by the [illegible] file of the lunar mountains [illegible] is a telescopic phenomenon [illegible] ble to the naked eye.

Besides, the edge [illegible] very irregular in outline, [illegible] ing in size, motion, etc.

best explanation seems to be that of Professor [illegible] thought that they were due to "a flickering of the thin crescent of the sun, undulations in the same way as the [illegible] is produced."

This serves to explain the variability and irregularity which are not noticed by the other visibility under the state of the atmosphere at the moment of the eclipse, with other local circumstances.

The vanishing of a star seems [illegible] a very narrow [illegible] tions caused by [illegible] tions, or variations of [illegible] very noticeable, with [illegible] of light, like that [illegible] sun or any celestial [illegible] body, retains its [illegible] in spite of variations [illegible] fect the whole of a [illegible]

Twinkling is most [illegible] when a star is [illegible] and close to the [illegible] will not be very [illegible] the time of the [illegible] that the shadow bands [illegible] usually conspicuous.

CHOOSE AS FRIENDS THOSE WHO GIVE YOU THE BEST TO DO

In choosing your associates, it is better to mingle one step beyond you rather than with those a step below you. It is a human tendency to regulate ourselves by those we associate with.

If those with whom you like to be are more intelligent you are likely to do more thinking and planning to make of success.

On the other hand, if your associates are not your equals lessen your efforts to advance.

In the worthwhile man there is created a desire to be [illegible] his set or among his fellows.

DR. CAROLINE HEDGER, learned lady of Chicago, has a new theory about corsets. She says they are "bad for fat women, but thin women need them." And this is the reason: "The thin women haven't anything on the outside to keep what's on the inside in place."

It isn't fat that keeps things "in place." It's muscle. If the extra woman develops a thin layer of muscle where it is needed, especially if she keeps her spine straight, she won't need any corsets.

THE SCIENTISTS say that human beings, including women, have bodies that were originally planned to go on all fours.

When you are on all fours the veins across the chest hold up the lungs, heart and liver normally. The muscles of the abdomen hold up the intestines, and all is serene.

When you put a creature intended to go on all fours standing upright on its hind legs, then everything sags down. Even so, the right position and the right muscle can be developed to take care of the situation.

JOHNS RYS, nineteen; John Emelto, twenty-one, were killed in the electric chair night before last for murdering a Chinese. Their notion that a Chinese didn't count did not save them from the electric chair.

WHEN, IF EVER, and where and how will those three meet again, the Chinese, and two white men that killed him? Will the Chinese look like a Chinese, and the white men look like white men, on the other side of the river of death? Is there any face prejudice there? Do they all look alike, or how?

AND HOW MUCH is civilization helped by killing two badly born, badly taught boys, instead of putting them in a prison with work that might reform them?

POSTMASTER MORGAN of New York city is dead of appendicitis. His typewriter was a tired, over-worked man. Three Presidents in succession appointed and approved him. He worked hard for the people, and considering ability and services rendered, he was an ill paid as any letter carrier or postal clerk. The people should set a more generous example in the treatment of their employes.

OLD-FASHIONED tampering with the vote hasn't died out entirely. Years ago this writer, voting in New York city in a polling place in Oliver street, downtown, was told by an experienced local politician: "You are the only man in the line just now that can't be beaten. That old man with the whiskers and spectacles will vote twenty times today, at least.

OTHER TIMES, other methods.

A New York grand jury is investigating a regular "college" that trains in ballot-box frauds and operate in five different cities. One result of this institution for learning confesses to having made $50,000 in fees.

TEN SAUD, who operates in the neighborhood of old Bagdad, had a bad idea.

Forgetting about flying machines, he sent his tribesmen mounted to make raids on British possessions.

A few Englishmen flew over, attacked the Akkwan tribesmen with bombs and machine guns, killed fifty, and warned them not to be so foolish next time. Conditions have changed since men have learned to fly.

MONEY FOR speculating was cheap again yesterday, and that 1925 drop was once more postponed. Stocks went up, railroads leading. United States Steel made a new record since last year, going above 124. If you have any friends who gamble on the stock exchange, and want to do him a favor, advise him to sell this stock market short, for a little while, anyhow.

SOME NEWSPAPERS yesterday afternoon published [illegible] was with a rumor of Mussolini's assassination. He's alive still, but nobody knows better than he that he lives every day in danger of sudden death.

He has been obliged to rule by force, and knows that thousands of them would, would remove him by force. That must make government a nervous occupation.
